TO KILL MILLIONAIREShooting Followed Refusal of Stokes to Write Retraction of Slandorous Remarks, According to Assailants.Special to The Washington Herald.
New York, June 9.—Lillian Graham, the beautiful girl who, with her companion, Ethel Conrad, is held by the police, charged with attempting the life of W. E. D. Stokes, in a formal statement to-day revealed for the first time the inside story of her former friendship with the millionaire.
Physicians at the Roosevelt Hospital to-day announced that Stokes is recovering rapidly, and barring complications, will be able to leave the hospital early next week.
Here is Miss Graham's statement:
"I want the public to know that my life was wrecked by W. E. D. Stokes.
He is a very wicked man. While I never wanted to kill him, the world would be much better off without him.
When he came to our apartment on Wednesday afternoon I demanded that he retract the vile stories he circulated about my mother and myself. I had visited him at the Ansonia on previous occasions with a similar demand. His answer was a refusal, and he put me in his office with his accustomed brutality.
"I was in great need of money, and when I went to him for financial assistance he gave me aittance. There was no one else to whom I could turn and I sent Ethel to plead with him. Instead of granting my request he told her falsehoods about me.
"I don't suppose that, even after Mr.
Stokes became abusive to me in the apartment Wednesday night, and actually threatened physical violence, I could have thought of the pistol if I had not remembered Ethel's story.
"When Mr. Stokes arrived, Ethel and I were getting supper. I was frightened to see him.
"Stokes thought Ethel was alone—infact, I am sure he had come to see her alone. He blurted out that he had come to get the letters he had written me, but I knew he was lying. He did not care 6 cents for the letters. He is not the letter-writing kind. He simply made an excuse when he found that Ethel was not alone.
"When he saw me he seemed wild with rage. I was frightened, but I got up courage and demanded that he write out a retraction of all the slanderous statements he had made about me. I had the revolver in my hand, but before I knew it he was at my throat.
"I was helpless for a moment, but recovering at once, I partly freed myself from his grasp and I frightened him by firing at the floor. I am sure none of these shots struck Mr. Stokes. He seized the revolver and I screamed to Ethel.
She, poor child, was being held and killed. His back was toward her and she fired blindly.
"Three bullets hit him. But I am sure that he was not badly hurt. At least I hope so.
"I have made this statement freely.
There was nothing in my life to hide until I met Mr. Stokes."
Ethel Conrad is prepared to substantiate this account of the shooting. She issued the following statement in explanation of the Plattsburg (N. Y.) episode, in which she threatened Charles Miller with a revolver:
"When a man with a black lying tongue tells slanderous stories about a girl, what is there left for her to do but to make him eat his words? That is what I did in the Plattsburg case, and that is what any self-respecting girl with my temperament would do." Mrs. John Singleton, wife of the wealthy Los Angeles mine owner, and Mrs. Alice Andrews, sisters of Miss Graham, are now active in the case. Mrs.
Andrews is en route from San Francisco, and is expected to arrive Sunday.
Among the letters found in the apartment of the young women were three missives from a wealthy United States Senator from a Western State, who met Miss Graham in Paris.
One of these communications is a note, by which remittance of 2,000 francs is transmitted to Miss Graham. It contains this statement:
"I trust this will tide you over for another month."
Another letter, bearing the postmark "Washington, D. C.," is written upon stationery of a Senate committee. It is undated. Whether this letter also contained an inclosure of money is not established by the contents of the letter.
The police decline to discuss the contents of any of the letters said to have been written by Stokes to Miss Graham.
Although it has repeatedly stated that these missives were of the most harmless nature, it is said that there was one letter in particular which Mr. Stokes was very anxious to secure possession of.
This letter has disappeared.RED CROSS RUSHES AID TO COLIMA CITYHomeless in Destroyed Pacific Towns to Get Help from All Parts of Mexico—Madero Assists.Special Cable to The Washington Herald.
Mexico City, June 9.—Details of the eruption of Mount Colima are slowly trickling in to-day over wires that frequently failed. The story being sent by agents of the Red Cross show that on the western coast of Mexico has been enacted a tragedy of nature second only to that of Vesuvius.
No warning was given the natives at the base of the mountain when the eruption began. The volcano first poured out a blinding, suffocating cloud of ashes upon the villages in the fertile valley. The dust was followed by an overwhelming flood of molten lava that completed the work of destruction, and of the hundreds in the villages but few escaped to tell the story.
The natural agents of devastation are even continuing their work today. Landslides cut off all railroad traffic between Mexico City and Colima and Manzanillo. This will hamper the work of relief, but the Red Cross is active wherever it has been able to penetrate to its agents.
BURIED IN DEBRIS.
Many are dying in the hospital. Of the dead thirty-six bodies have been recovered and buried. Only those on the surface are cared for. The ruins of their former homes will probably be the only tombs the others have.
There are not enough left living to remove the dead and bury them. Scores of women and children lie crushed to death beneath the ruins of the churches, crushed while they were praying. Practically none of the worshippers escaped.
San Sebastian reports seventy dead, killed by falling walls.
Inhabitants of the town of Tonila were warned by a sudden subterranean roaring, and started to flee, but were overtaken by a rushing stream of lava and a shower of hot stones. Scores were crushed by flying boulders, and the rest overwhelmed by lava.
Residents of San Andres, which is closer to Colima's crater, heard the onward sweep of the lava and rushed out of doors. There they were buried under the lava, sand, and ashes.
News of the eruption of Mount Bacalar was brought from the interior of Yucatan by couriers, who were five days on the way from the lake to Progreso. They declared that the few refugees who fled from the Indian villages when the eruption began were nearly all burned to death in the blazing forests.
President de la Barra and Francisco Madero, who have been collaborating in allied plans for the relief of the people in this city, today turned away from the capital with its less than 200 dead, and bent their efforts to aiding the stricken in the section of the country about Colima where the main force of the first quake was felt.
In the country around Colima heavy damage was done to forty-one cities, all with a population of more than 15,000 souls. Seven of these are reported to have been completely destroyed.
That fully 50,000 are homeless is the belief of government officials, and everything possible will be done to render aid to the refugees. Special trains to carry troops and as large a supply of food as can be quickly assembled are being procured.POLICE AUCTION TO-DAY.Several Wagon Loads of "Junk" Will Go Under Hammer.Property of suicides, who left no rela-

In addition to bicycles, one motorcycle, numerous silk hats, trunks, and wearing apparel, the collection includes a number of prayer and hymn books, revolvers, knives, razors, and other weapons will be broken up and dumped in the Potomac River.CANADIAN PACIFICThe Muskoka Lakes and Islands of Georgian Bay
